

War a Tragedy for All Says Yugoslav Minister

The war in Bosnia is a great tragedy for all sides in the conflict, Minister of Religious Affairs Dragan Dragojlovich told an Ohio State University audience on February 16. Dragojlovich, who is a minister of the Serbian cabinet in the federal Republic of Yugoslavia, delivered a talk in the Contemporary Issues in the Balkans Lecture Series sponsored by University's the Center for Slavic and East European Studies and Resource Center for Medieval Slavic Studies. The aim of the series is to present different views of the conflict in Bosnia and to shed light on developments in the war-torn Yugoslav lands.

Dragojlovich began his talk with an overview of the break-up of Yugoslavia and the fighting which began there in July 1991, not long after the Slovene and Croatian secession. The invasion of Bosnia by the Yugoslav Army and Bosnian Serb militias began in April 1992. Dragojlovich was critical of the role of the Bosnian government under President Alija Izetbegovic. Dragojlovich laid much of the responsibility for the start of the conflict on Izetbegovic's actions. Dragojlovich was skeptical of attempts by the Bosnians to create a multi-national state. To the audience he posed the question: "If Yugoslavia fell apart because Serbs, Croats, Slovenes and Bosnians cannot live together, than can a multi-national Bosnian state survive?"

Dragojlovich reserved his severest criticism for the great powers, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO), and the United Nations, and he spoke at length about the sanctions imposed on the former Yugoslavia. The minister called attention to the effect of sanctions on every day life, and the misery they have caused. He noted that one of the most important effects of the blockade was a severe energy shortage. It is also responsible for an acute economic downturn, which has left nearly 2 million men and women unemployed and many factories idle. He was especially critical of the arbitrary manner in which sanctions are enforced, noting that while medical supplies were exempted in theory, obstacles still stood in the way of their import. Dragojlovich said the reason the sanctions were introduced is no longer important, and that the lifting of sanctions now is a step toward normalization.

Dragojlovich, whose lecture focused on moral issues and the role of certain leading players, decried the destruction unleashed by the conflict, stressing that all sides suffer in the conflict. "For those who have died, it does not matter what state they lie in," he said.

A part of the talk was devoted to issues of religion in the current Yugoslav state. Dragojlovich described the religious diversity of the current Yugoslav state, where more than 50 denominations exist side-by-side. He stressed the harmonious relations between confessions. He pointed out that the Serbian Orthodox Church hierarchy had protested the destruction of the conflict. However, he was pessimistic about the ability of religious organizations to find a resolution to the conflict: "Once war starts, churches cannot stop it."

The next lecture in the Contemporary Issues in the Balkans series will take place on Thursday, March 2 at 4:30 p.m. in the Law School Auditorium. Omer Hadziselimovic of the University of Sarajevo will present a talk entitled "Bosnian Muslims: Unwilling Warriors." The series will conclude with a talk by Ohio State Professor Carole Rogel, "Independent Slovenia," on Wednesday, April 26, 1995 at 1:30 p.m. in 122 Oxley Hall.

Icons and Politics: KSU Professor on "Moscow, Third Rome"

Russian rulers from the 1550s ascribed only a figurative interpretation to the sixteenth-century "Moscow--the Third Rome" theory, according to Prof. Isolde Thyret of the Kent State University Department of History. Thyret spoke on the often ignored iconographic and art historic evidence to students and faculty at a lecture sponsored by The Ohio State University

Icons and Politics

Center for Slavic and East European Studies on January 11.

Thyrêt, who received a Ph.D. in history from the University of Washington, is studying the katapetasma liturgical curtain presented to the church of the Presentation of the Virgin in the Temple in the Hilandar Monastery on Mount Athos by Tsar Ivan IV and his wife on November 20, 1555. She argued in her talk and in a recent article in The Russian Review that the katapetasma can provide valuable insight into the way the Russian tsar envisioned his role in relation to the once illustrious spiritual center of the Byzantine empire.

Analysis of the katapetasma, according to Thyrêt, reveals that the royal couple wanted to convey the claim that Ivan received the blessing of the Divine for his rule just as the Byzantine emperor had before him. And this point was not lost on the Serbian monks of the Hilandar Monastery, who called Ivan "the second Constantine of the New Rome, the royal city of Moscow, which is protected by God." While the iconography of the katapetasma associates the idea of the Third Rome with the Russian ruler, this is not the full story. According to Thyrêt, it is necessary to raise the question of how this idea was constructed and the extent to which it was realized in the 1550s.

Thyrêt finds that the curtain's iconography emphasizes the sacral foundations of the Russian tsar's rule by linking him with Christ and the Old Testament priest-king Melchizedek and emphasizing his pious qualities. Absent from the composition are themes of the succession of empires. In addition, the katapetasma suggests a shift in the Muscovite ruler ideology from a Byzantine to a more native connotation necessitated by relations with the Ottoman Empire, which controlled the Balkans and Mt. Athos. Despite the entreaties of the monks of Mt. Athos to intervene on their behalf, the prospect of a conflict with the Ottoman sultan over the monastery was not appealing. The tsar as a result adopted a cautious stance politically and ideologically. The gift of the curtain was an opportunity for the tsar to express his perception of his position in the Orthodox world, and in it he rejected any notion of a dynastic connection from which the monks might construe specific duties on his part.

The Russian Sampler Students Investigate Russian Box of Chocolates

Nearly 100 students, faculty and staff took part in a series of Russian sampler courses offered by The Ohio State University Department of Slavic and East European Languages and Literatures, in January. The aim of the program was to increase interest in Russian language and culture. Despite the fact that there are more opportunities for individuals with Russian language training than ever before, the years since the fall of the Iron Curtain have seen a steady decline in interest in the language, at Ohio State and across the nation.

The one-hour course strove to reduce students' "fear of Russian." The classes provided students with an introduction to the Cyrillic alphabet and some useful Russian phrases. The program, four sessions, held on January 24 and 26, took place at a variety of sites, including the College of Agriculture and the Max M. Fisher College of Business, to make participation more accessible and attractive to students there. The program organizer was Ms. Donnie Sendelbach, a graduate teaching associate and Ph.D. candidate in the Slavic Department. It was also Sendelbach who initiated the project. Teaching associates Erin Diehm, Dianna Horne, Jennifer Sunseri, and Ruth Warner all lead individual sessions.

Ohio State Russian teachers have taken heart from the program's strong showing. "We are really pleased to see so many people interested in learning Russian. The classes were a greater success than we imagined," said Sendelbach. Sendelbach credits part of the program's success to cooperation with other university units, especially the Colleges of Agriculture and Max M. Fisher College of Business Administration. She singled out Mr. Dan Salazar, a fellow of the College of Agriculture, and Ms. Tracy Thoman and Prof. James Kinnard, leading supporters of Russian studies in the College of Business, as making important contributions. "We received a great deal of help. I think, we can look forward to more in the future."

A second round of Russian sampler classes is planned for Spring Quarter, the week of April 24. Offerings in other Slavic languages—the Slavic Department also offers Czech, Polish, Romanian and Serbo-Croatian—are contemplated.

Ohio AATSEEL Resuscitated

The Ohio affiliate of the American Association of Teachers of Slavic and East European Languages (AATSEEL) was revived at the Ohio Foreign Language Association meeting on March 3-4 at the Stouffer Tower City Center in Cleveland. AATSEEL is the professional organization for teachers of Russian and East European languages in the United States. Ohio AATSEEL members include teachers of Russian and other Slavic languages at all levels, from elementary and secondary to post-secondary and graduate levels.

The AATSEEL meeting in Cleveland was organized by Ms. Marian Walters of START High School in Toledo. The session featured discussion of issues in the teaching of Russian and members also heard reports on the state of Russian programs in Ohio. Dr. Timothy Pogacar, associate professor in the Bowling Green State University Department of Germanic, Russian and East Asian Languages, presented "Cultural Literacy in Textbooks of Russian." Pogacar also read a paper by Dr. Irina Stakhanova, also of Bowling Green, "Text and Learner in Beginning Russian Textbooks." Ms. Adonica Sendelbach of The Ohio State University Department of Slavic and East European Languages and Literatures presented a report "The Implementation of Russian Sampler Classes at The Ohio State University." Walters reported on the upcoming Ohio Russian Olympiada competition for high school students. A report on the upcoming Slavic Day program, to be held at Bowling Green, was also heard.

Cleveland, home to Ohio's largest Slavic and East European immigrant community, was a fitting locale for the AATSEEL revival. Members of the Ohio State delegation supplemented conference activities with visits to the city's many fine East European restaurants and shops. Participants in this year's meeting hope that this first step will lead to a true revival of AATSEEL in Ohio and that more Ohio educators will avail themselves of the chance to discuss issues in Russian teaching at the next meeting. For more information: Marian Walters, START High School, 2100 Tremainsville Rd., Toledo, OH 43613.

Slavic Day Is Here Again BGSU Hosts East European fête

Bowling Green State University will host the 1995 Ohio Slavic Day for high school students, on Thursday March 30. The program features discussions, activities and workshops to explore and develop students' interests in Russian and East European language and culture. Although an annual event of the Ohio Slavic studies community, Slavic Day was last held in 1992-1993. Bowling Green hosted the event for several consecutive years prior to 1992-1993.

This year's Slavic Day will feature workshops on Russian dance, music, cuisine, and study abroad. A demonstration of traditional Russian Easter Egg decoration is also scheduled. The final event in this year's program will be the Quiz Bowl, an Ohio Slavic Day tradition. The contest will pit teams from Ohio schools against each other in a test of their cunning and their knowledge of Russian politics, society, and culture. The winner will claim possession of the Borsht Cup trophy, until it can be wrested from them in the next competition. Workshops and demonstrations will be led by Bowling Green faculty, staff and students as well as Ohio high school Russian teachers.

Students from Ohio's 12 high and middle schools with Russian language programs are expected to participate. While participants in past years have been drawn from Russian language students, Slavic Day organizers hope that students and teachers from schools offering Russian history or Russian civilization courses will also participate, according to Dr. Timothy Pogacar. Pogacar, who is associate professor of Russian at BGSU and coordinator for this year's Slavic Day programs, sees many benefits to the program. It allows students to explore Russian society and culture as well as language and area studies at the post-secondary level and career options. In addition, Slavic Day allows students from Ohio's dispersed Russian programs to meet and to compare their experiences. Pogacar is optimistic about the future of Slavic Day in Ohio and this year's program. "Judging from the responses [to the last Slavic Day] people were enthusiastic," said Pogacar.

For more information on participation in this year's or future programs contact: Dr. Timothy Pogacar, Department of GREAL; Bowling Green State University; Bowling Green, OH 43403; (419) 372-8028.

Film & Video Library

Nová Česká Videa

Oratorio for Prague. Directed by Jan Nemec. Czechoslovakia, 1990. Black and white, 26 min. One of the most powerful documentaries ever made and a unique document of the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia in 1968. The film was begun as a documentary about the liberalization of Czechoslovakia and then simply continued when the Russian forces invaded. The only film record of the Soviet Invasion of Czechoslovakia, the raw footage for Oratorio for Prague, when broadcast on television became the first information that the Soviet Army had not been "invited" in.

O slavnosti a hostech [A Report on the Party and the Guests]. Directed by Jan Nemec. Czechoslovakia, 1966. Czech with English subtitles. Black and white, 71 min. Distinguished by being "banned forever" in Czechoslovakia, A Report on the Party and the Guests is a great film of the flowering of Czech cinema in the 1960s. The film examines the process of self-deception and rationalization which leads to an acceptance of constraint; free will and freedom are seen as easily discarded and difficult to maintain.

Check out these Czech classics as well: Transport from Paradise, Shop on Main Street, Pytláková schovanka, Prodána nevěsta [The Bartered Bride], and more!

"Man of Iron" is Here!

Człowiek z żelazu [Man of Iron]. Directed by Andrzej Wajda. Poland, 1981. Polish with English subtitles. Color, 1981. The sequel to the acclaimed Man of Marble, the film tells the story of the turbulent period of Poland's history from 1968 to 1981 through the eyes of an alcoholic journalist ordered to smear a Solidarity organizer. The film weaves together fictional and documentary footage, including rare footage of the abortive 1968 and 1970 strikes.

Spring Quarter 1995

The newsletter designed to bring you the news from the OSU Russian House as well as upcoming events

After an amazingly successful first quarter this past fall, the Russian House followed suit with a busy winter quarter full of events. Included were another series of Russian films, Russian conversation sessions, (our now-famous) potluck dinners, including one specifically for Maslenitsa, and a series of pizza-party style gatherings for Slavic Department graduate students during the department's recent job search for a professor of literature. All department graduate students were invited to spend an evening at the house talking to the individual candidates in a relaxing atmosphere to see them in a different light. The quarter was a tremendous success and will be followed by what looks to be a fantastic spring quarter..... Upcoming is another series of great films, more dinners, a performance by Rusalka (the Russian Choir) and even more surprises.....

FILMS.....	April 4	Inspector General	Gogol's story of political corruption	SUBTITLED
	April 18	Ivan Vasilievich Changes His Profession	fantasy	SUBTITLED
	May 2	Autumn Marathon	soap opera about an author's family	SUBTITLED
	May 16	A Bad Good Guy	based on Chekhov's DUEL	SUBTITLED

All films are scheduled to begin at 8 p.m. ... immediately following Tuesday evening conversation sessions. All films are Russian with English subtitles.

DINNERS.....	April 2nd	April 30th	May 28th
---------------------	------------------	-------------------	-----------------

All dinners begin at 7 p.m. Bring along your favorite slavic dish (or beverage) and enjoy some great company (and of course food).

The date of the Rusalka performance has yet to be scheduled, so keep your eyes open for more information on this and other surprises to come.....

Regular RUSSIAN conversation sessions are held EVERY TUESDAY AT 7 p.m.

An end of the quarter tutoring session will be offered Sunday June 4th at 5 p.m.
